Columbia City Mayor Ryan Daniel Elected 2015-16 Conference of Mayors President Sullivan Mayor Clint Lamb becomes vice-president

INDIANAPOLIS – At their annual meeting last week in Kokomo, the Indiana Conference of Mayors (ICOM) elected Columbia City Mayor Ryan Daniel president of the organization. Daniel took office immediately and will serve for one year in the position.

“I’m honored my peers have chosen me to lead such a respected and influential group of Hoosier mayors,” said Daniel. “Having the opportunity to serve the citizens of Columbia City continues to be rewarding and meaningful to me and my family. I look forward to bringing this same enthusiasm to my new leadership role within ICOM.”

“More than 65% of Indiana’s resident’s live in a city or town. Throughout the coming year Indiana’s mayors will continue our work convincing lawmakers, policymakers and thought leaders that fostering more local decision is what Indiana needs to improve the Hoosier economy and the quality of life in our communities,” Daniel continued.

Sullivan Mayor Clint Lamb was elected by ICOM members to serve as the group’s vice-president. Both Daniel and Lamb are currently serving in their first term as mayors and are running for re-election in November.

The Indiana Conference of Mayors (ICOM), an affiliate of the Indiana Association of Cities and Towns (IACT), was formed in 1998. Its purpose is to give special focus to the needs, issues and concerns of the elected chief executive of Indiana’s 119 cities.
